SOCIAL DETERMINANTS OF HEALTH (SENIOR FACULTY POSITION)

The University of South Carolina's Arnold School of Public Health invites applications for a tenured/tenure-track faculty position at the level of Professor for scholars interested in social determinants of health. This senior faculty member would contribute to the leadership and expansion of the school's existing strengths in research, teaching, and outreach related to addressing health disparities through understanding and acting on social determinants of health. Scholarly interests should be guided by a social-determinants perspective emphasizing social, political, economic, and/or cultural factors that are embedded in our society and influence population health.

The position will be in the Department of Health Promotion, Education, and Behavior (<http://www.sph.sc.edu/hpeb>). The Department is interdisciplinary, collaborative, energetic, and progressive. Candidates are expected to demonstrate achievement in scholarship commensurate with appointment at full rank, a strong record of extramural funding, ability to mentor junior faculty members, and ability to foster our partnerships with community, state, national, and global organizations. Candidates should possess a doctoral degree in public health, health behavior or promotion, sociology, anthropology, policy sciences, psychology, epidemiology, or a related field.

To apply: Send letter of application, curriculum vita, a copy of two scholarly works, and contact information for three references to: Ken Watkins, Ph.D., Search Committee Chair, c/o Memory Bacon, Department of Health Promotion, Education, and Behavior, Arnold School of Public Health, University of South Carolina, Columbia, SC 29208; Phone (803) 777-6255, Fax (803) 777-6290. Electronic applications may be sent to mroyal@sc.edu.
